Assisting West Point Graduate From the Service to an Ivy-League MBA.

by Peter M. Cline on April 22

Followers and Supporters of Boots to Books, in recent months we have made bounds towards our goal of assisting transitioning veterans; including receiving our tax-exempt determination from the IRS and receiving inquiries from Soldiers in need. Today I am proud to write that Boots to Books has assisted and will continue to assist a West Point graduate, who is currently a Captain in the Army and applying to various Ivy-league business schools.

Thus far Boots to Books has provided his GRE preparation course (pictured to the left), as well as counseling regarding the application process and using scholarship funds. We will continue to provide him support throughout his journey.

The change we have made this far, however small on the national scale, has made all of our work beyond gratified. If you are a transitioning Soldier, know that we are in your corner, and we can always be found at www.boots2books.com. To our supporters, thank you and let us continue to serve those who have so courageously served us.
